

Bored And Sick

For Four days now I have had a terrible cold that has led to nasal congestion, fever, fatigue, dizziness and headaches. It hit me like a train. I went to bed feeling great having not been sick in over 6 years and the next morning I felt like someone had blown anthrax up my nose while I was asleep. I am still sick and am miserable. I cant exercise, I cant read, hell I can barely focus on watching television. I had totally forgotten how much it sucks to get sick. I am suddenly reminded of the fragile nature of our health and life in general. To make matters worse I am bored completely out of my mind. All my mail lately has been legal in court related matters and I miss my penpals. Being in solitary seems to be even more maddening with a tv because though it is sometimes entertaining mostly it reminds me of all that I am missing in my life. As if Ive been locked in a mausoleum still alive and noone ever comes to let me out.
