

They Call Me An Asshole

Its funny but my fellow inmates seem to think I am an asshole. At least this is the prevailing opinion. Im definitely not going to win any popularity contests in here. I am impatient. I dislike liars, cons, and I dont suffer fools gladly or otherwise. I cant imagine why some men feel the need to chatter so much about nothing. To gossip about one another worse than a group of teenagers. Judging from what I see on tv this phenomenon is not isolated to prison. So does this make me antisocial? Or am I just more suited to socializing with a more serious and intellectually competent group of people. This morning two young men began a loud conversation at 4 am wherein during the course of listening to this agonizing sound I heard one reveal he was unable to spell the word brochure. This was funny to me in a nasty snobbish way but does it make me an asshole to hold my peers in such utter contempt? Is it me that is an asshole or are my fellow inmates just a loathsome example of what our society generates? I hope its the latter.
