

God Is Committed To Us

April 23, 2013

Be careful around people who don't value themselves; because they're incapable of valuing you. Look for those who enhance you, not inhibit you; who fertilize your mind and fortify your faith. When you're around them you'll see your best ~~qualities~~ qualities mirrored, and be nurtured by the words that come from their lips. When you encounter somebody who says you have nothing to offer, be sure to laugh; it's impolite to hear a joke and not laugh! I've developed these codes of ethics while serving my time here in prison. Everyday I sit back and analyze my surroundings and conclude that God is committed to me. When God made us He stepped back and said "That's very good." So I had to stop entertaining contrary opinions; which is the equivalent of trying to dodge rain drops in the rain, here in prison. We as prisoners have so much potential that the word "possibility" is written all over us. We're just humans that made mistakes. But by God's grace we can be everything He desires and planned for us to be. His plan is unwavering unless we ~~were~~ veer off the beaten path. God's love isn't based on our performance. He didn't pick us because of our virtues; or abandon us because we're in prison. He's the God of second chances, and third ones too. The God who gets us through each prison day, is the same God who will carry us until our parole day. He's committed to us. We just have to make sure we're committed to Him.

Rechell Williams # V69138 A3/18/6
P.O. Box 5248
CORCORAN, CA 93212

