

WORLD TRADE CENTER TROPHY?!!?

I just read something that gave me a little disturbed thought:

"A 5-foot-long piece of twisted metal from one of the planes that flew into the World Trade Center on 9/11 was just found last week several blocks away from the towers' location. The piece—a motorized part of a wing flap—was wedged into an 18-inch-wide space between a luxury apartment building and the planned "Ground Zero" mosque that caused protests in 2011."

I just hope it was there by chance, and not put there by human hands; because that would be wrong in so many ways. Objects like that can serve as a trophy to sick individuals of the fanatical nature. What if it were put there in secret, so that it could, when built, be somehow incorporated into the "Ground Zero" mosque. It wouldn't be that far fetched; look at the U.S. military ship that the North Koreans captured and are, at this time, building a massive anti-American complex that will showcase the dry-docked ship in its lobby! (Why couldn't The child king "Kim Jong-un" spend his time doing something cooler, like maybe marching all his toy soldiers to "Garbage" singing "I'm Only Happy When it Rains"--and in his case, the rain would of course be the nuclear fallout of his own lands.)

The article wasn't very detailed, so my conjecture is in consequence of that. Of course the piece couldn't simply ridden the wind, but if it didn't....
