RE: RESPONSE TO LindaCJolly

Dear Ms. Taylor:

I'm extremely delightful to hear from you again and I'm further extremely delightful to share in your personal delima that you and your son Randy has been forced to endure on a daily basis for who know how long.

Nevertheless, Linda, believe me when I tell you that I know absolutely how you feel, and you have the right to feel as you do towards a system, that has inflicted total destruction upon you and your family under the disguise of justice and fairness to your disadvantage and there advantage.

Further, you're absolutely right Linda, 90% of what happens us is beyond our control, with a 10% self reaction, but, its always easy to do the wrong thing, instead of doing the right things Linda, dont ever foreget that.

Why dont you encourage Randy to get involved in litigating his case, and with prayer and Randy's self determination in legally rectifying his current situation, maybe relief will come to him and you sooner than the both of you guys think Linda.

I took the time to teach myself the mechanics of the American legal system Linda, and in doing so, I can inform you that I seen a side of the legal system that I had been apart of in a light that will forever be a beam of realization until the day that I decease.

Law is what placed your son where he is now, and law is what will bring him back home to you, thats a fact Linda, all you and Randy need is faith in the ability to overcome what has been placed upon him and you as well, and keep moving forward extending complete kindness to those you encounter, as in Hebrew 13 v 2,3.

I had 25-to-life Linda, and I never gave up on the fact that I would regain my freedom, sooner than a lot of people would believe, however, the way I fought utilizing the law to obtain the libery that I so easily relinquished, made me realize how much I had given away so easily.

Now I have something that I can build upon and further, extend to those individuals seeking the light of insperation when theres nothing left but the sight of prison, a long sentence and no one in your corner for support.

Sometimes Linda, we have to pray for those who has lost there way, be strong for those who has fallen weak, aid and completely support those who need our assistance, and most important Linda, we must at all time never foreget our struggle, aim and final destination to always overcome chaos and confusion we are constantly faced with.

I promis you I have Randy in my prayers and believe me when I tell you prayer works Linda. PS If you want to you can correspond directly to me at: Allan Tracy Gilmore, V-28333, C.M.C. East, P.O.
