MY PERFECT Woman

would be one of imperfections. Her eyes could tell tales of Love of family and friends that have stayed friends when water has risen almost sinking the ship. She wouldn't use a scale in her expectations. Her body wouldn't have to be any certain way. Her beauty would rest through loving even those that society considers of lower standards. Her reputation precedes her like Grandma's Chocolate Chip Cookies

This woman people would say I was talking about an angel. And if I did not know her - I would agree. But I know this lovely lady is flesh. But in my heart she's angelic. And a councilor to my soul, Perhaps a bit out of my league.
