

Misery Loves Company

By: Della E. Jones

Oh no! not you again, what do you want from me?
Everytime I find happiness, here comes misery.
I don't need you right now, I got peace of mind, and why do you bring your friend, frustration everytime?
I don't like him! this ain't no family reunion, who do you think you are? what are you doing?
you've already taken my joy, and my virtue, misery you need to leave, before I hurt you!
you've taken my courage, most importantly my patience, my kindness too, hey ref! that foul was flagrant.
I can't stand you, got me stranded in my nightmares, can't even relax, cause you're always right there Get off my back already, just leave me be, take frustration and your cousin anger then flee.
Go mess with someone else, go to the cell next door, take your damn demons, cause I can't take no more want to meditate in silence, and stare at the moon while in solitude smelling my letters full of perfume I can't enjoy one day, without you showing your face, you make my skin crawl, man you're so out of place Never want me happy, so I know you don't care, but I can't take your stubborn ass, so go over there.
Guard! Guard! come get this jackass out of my cell misery loves company, especially when you're in Jail!!
