

REPLY ID PPW - PRISON POETRY WORKSHOP
FROM: Luis D. Perez

REPLY-ID-PRISON POETRY WORKSHOP

QUIVERS IN THE CEMETERY*

Footprints eager for the past, and working from memories dream with eyes open and think to catch a falling star.

Brothers and sisters struggling in the living
"CEMETERY"

Do not crawl, the company of the living death makes me feel

"THE SHIVERS"
going up the soul and inspire me to create a bridge for other to cross.

It is a simple saying as creating unconditional
"LOVE"

Life is a passing desire from other people who live here as a human beings before we entered the world as a crying baby.

Look around in your own environment with sadness raining inside the veins and think that every day is a very

"SPECIAL DAY"
With those quivers around your body think again about who really love you.

I wonder if you feel the "QUIVERS"

Luis Perez is serving life sentence without parole since 1971. - With 42 years of incarceration, he shares part of his own experiences, struggling with prison life, and surviving a prison subculture by expressing his thoughts on:
"QUIVERS IN THE CEMETERY"

