

#145

Letter to St. Steph

Thank you for working on the transcription of my monster post, #13, "fraud & fiscal profligacy..." I'm sure it's a pain, but it's one of my most important posts. As for it being too technical for my readers... I've invited law professors, lawyers, judges, philosophy professors... & journalists to follow my blog, which is why I try to back up what I claim & be as specific as possible, even though this may exceed the "human-stories-from-prison" philosophy of BtB. Too many prison writers make outlandish, distraught claims, thus discrediting arguments for reform. My monster post lays it all out, piece by piece, how what's going on is a) stupid, & b) a huge waste of money. I'll let others explain how it hurts their feelings. Anyhoo, nice to meet you & thanks for your thoughts. Don't be shy.

Hey, hopefully I'll never be happy, because then my writing will suck & I'll stop struggling for the lost city of El Dorado, which leads to all the other cool discoveries/ideas I plop on here. Best assured, I cope with life. You're right; I get 3 hots & a cat & some out there don't got that. I hustle ^{not meaning selling drugs etc.} for what I can & cope with what comes. Ain't cryin', but I am trying to better my situation, which is atypically ~~reape~~ ^{Spartaner} (ɔ) than even those by me, as I hope you too are doing. None of my calls for material help are directed at those out there struggling to get by, but, as you seem to know, it's they who, ironically, are most likely to help.

Truly sorry about your cracked tooth." I had a dentist here, about 14 yrs. ago, use a drill to remove a wisdom tooth (!?), & he went nuts, fid up the molar in front of it. He did it sadistically, & when I pursued a claim on it, his supervisor switched out the x-rays to hide the proof. Not sure why he did it. But it was crazy. Point is, don't overestimate the health care we get. Yeah, the current dentist is cool, as I'll later explain. — Do they have any charitable health services where you live? I really wish I could help; a cracked tooth can lead to an abcess & go right to your brain. Please look up charitable dentistry on the web, as you do have net access. Give me an idea as to where you live - rural, urban - & I'll think up other possibilities. Dental students & such sometimes take patients for "practice."

More later...

1 of 1

Take Care, Nate