Dear CjP,

Thank you for your interest in my writings. I may not articulate properly, all the time, but it is good to know that it's readable. :) :) I try to write about issues that are relatable to anybody willing to discuss the issue. And it is a great honor to know that my words are being read.

The blog about bullying, was really hard to write. I didn't want to get it wrong, then I'm being called a social media bully. But that was a topic that I had been struggling with for a while. I think if you give kids the right tools to handle these situations, then they won't have such a negative effect on them, when it comes up in everyday society. Our children are our most precious commodity, but if we are nonfeasant, when it comes to the care of our babies, then shame on us all.

Anyway, I will try to always write about issues and topics that will continue to engage your interest. And if you ever feel the need to write me personally, my name and address is up top. I know that for me having someone to talk too is a big relief from the pressures of prison life. My blog is my stress reliever, but there are always things that should never go out on the air waves of the world. So if you ever need an ear the offer stands.

Respectfully,

Teze
