i have a extremely individualize, & a extremely personalize style of writing, to individualize & to personalize a discussion i'm involved in through my writing, & to play ~~that~~ to my strengths as a extremely nonconventional type person, & to empower myself in said discussion with my words, which are my weapon of choice, if you will, my style of writing has a heavy counter culture tone to it, & the influences on myself & my writing are western & counter culture, even though i'm a black african descent person, & i'm writing to a very specific person, which is a person who can look beyond my style of writing, to the spirit of what i'm saying, a style of writing that i see is close to my own style, is that of indigenous persons^s / people, at heart i'm very much a aboriginal, & i feel most comfortable in a aboriginal cultural context, i favor a broad inclusive, flexible but relevant style of discussion, to hold in the discussion whose involved in the discussion, my view of discussion is to relate to a person as best i can, on what level they are on, & i greatly appreciate efforts to relate to me on the level i'm on, because i think this reaffirms my humanity, & this is the focus of my efforts to interact & to relate in ways that reaffirm humanity, i have a maroonage societal concept, maroons where run-away slaves societies, in the western hemisphere, when there was legal racial chattel slavery in the western hemisphere, these societies where very efficient, very functional, agrarian, hunter, gatherer societies, i put myself forth as a nucleus for a modern society of this style, my role in a community of this style, will be that of a civic coordinator, i'm thinking here of a
