

black africans have the longest history of armed opposition to colonialism & neo colonialism, in the western hemisphere, & in the world, usually as individuals & groups, societal armed opposition being less common, a typical day in a maroon community was the morning spent working on community duties, the afternoon spent in individual meetings, discussing what was going on with individual community members, the evenings & nights were time off, besides the two to three evenings & nights, set aside a week for community history discussion, & religious & political discussions, this is the community model i advocate, in this community model my role will be to coordinate individual meetings, to coordinate community history education, & to coordinate religious & political discussions, this community model relates

page 2

8/11/13

closest to the struggle of indigenous peoples communities in the western hemisphere.

post for [http://betweenthebars.org/
blogs/1491](http://betweenthebars.org/blogs/1491)