

Dear Kat,

Thanks again for reading my reply and respond; and thanks for the nice remarks you have made about me. Kat, I really did not meant you literally "finding me someone". Let me apologize for that please. Because my phrases may appear to be so loaded, simply because, I've been incarcerated too long (smile); or because I remain perpetually in the state of a poet's mode, when I write.

What I meant by "helping push that agenda" are little things: like creating a small profile for me--on free dating sites, in my area (54768; 54601; [Wisconsin zip-codes]), or by transcribing a poem of mine you think is romantic, and post it somewhere else, or expose it thru different media on the internet.

Kat, the comment you've made "you are writing on this website. someone will recognize you as the special person that you are..." is true. However, I've gotten only two comments, I believe, before yours, in a span of three years.

Kat, I have left the world 13 years ago, and the internet that I have left, has become an uncontrollable monster, having universes of "webs" and labyrinths, too immense to explore; unless one has the ability and the means. You stumbled on my poem, when you did. But it has been posted at least a year or two, before you saw it. The only living soul I have who, who have contacted me are my father, he is 70+, and a brother who is computer illiterate. I have only you, and between the bars (the website where you saw this). Between the Bars has way too many requests from prisoners like me. You responded because of your compassion (thanks for that).

Kat, when I said "urgency" in my last reply. I really meant alot of things that I did not want to display on this weblog, things that were too much to list, or too private. For instance, I have not seen my "only" child in 13 years, since she was born. And this teen-girl will probably blame me for not even trying and search for her, in anyway that I can. And you are my witness.

Thus finding someone may be the only way to remedy that problem and other problems that I cannot list here. Who can do these things for me, best except a significant other? And considering my situation. It will take a very special someone with compassion to take steps in initiating, even that first visit between my daughter and I.

Plus there is the other side of that urgency-my wrongful conviction...That's another story.

And it has been 13 years already!

Childeric,

→ The daily page.com
Tag.com
Plenty of fish.com

here are some suggestions

Thanks