

No Ordinary Love Pg 1 of 1

I was thinking about the "Side Song" "No Ordinary Love" and decided to create my own Rap to it using the Song as my Chorus.

At First I thought about No ordinary love being in a relationship with someone thats locked up and then I took it deeper and came up with the idea of No Ordinary love being the relationship I've developed with a Prison Cell after being locked up so long.

The Rap is written as if im talking to a woman but really all my words are directed to the 4 walls that surround me. I performed to some guys and the track has taken the institution by storm resulting in my having daily requests to Rap the tune.

2013 has been bad for me in many ways but not musically. I've written alot of new material so thats a plus. I would like to know if any of you have a love with something or someone that isnt ordinary for any good or bad reason?

I'd love to hear your Responses At:

LYRICS to Ordinary love (verse 3) P9 10f1

You never been one to talk much
But you there through it all and that's what I call love -
And despite the stench when the stall flush You there to the end and that's what I call love -
Who should I call up, phone on you call Cops monitoring each call with a small bug - I don't need my balls bust, this relationship is hazardous We've known each other so long what will we do after this - Will all the chatter end, cry's mixed with laughter and everything we been through doesn't seem to matter when - Life's been a disaster spent, loved a prison cell
This rap's all about my relationship with a prison cell -
I heard prison tales, war stories, read victims mail
But never have I heard of love and intimacy with a cell - Is this dude for real - realer than I ever been Real enough to know I need love I ain't ~~no~~ locked in - ~~xxx~~ Like I mentioned in my "no ordinary love" posting. The concept of this rap is my developing a relationship with a prison cell having been confined to one going on 12 years. I'd love to hear you feed back on what you think about the lyrics and the concept.
