

That one letter, That one Person... Pg 1 of 1

I can't speak for everyone who blogs on this site, but I can say I'm sure many are hoping or anticipating that one letter, person, e-mail, or something that will forever change their life.

In prison we are anchored down with negativity, denial, defeated attitudes. We don't lack the feelings of being wanted, accepted, cared for or loved. Many if not all the people we knew have forgotten us or moved on and we all blog in hopes of finding someone from our past or someone new to say "hey, you exist to me."

Some of us seek love, companionship, while others seek friendship or spiritual guidance. Some may seek legal support, mentorship, or encouragement but make no mistake... we are all seeking someone or something that can change all this misery in this cage to something hopeful... something life changing.

It may not be my posts you read to inspire you to write but if you're inspired to write someone on this site - I know do so. A simple hi, a photo, a shout out, advice, acknowledgement of attraction, or anything to give one of us hope will help all of us. Many of us just want someone to believe in us when everyone else has turned their back on us. Write that letter... Be that person.
