

FALL APART, FALL TOGETHER

"Patience is a virtue. Good things come to those who wait." If you are patient enough, good things will eventually be there to substitute for the bad. Unfortunately, the bad will always be there, just waiting for the perfect opportunity to spoil the good. Bad is jealous of good, because good is what most people love more. People just expect bad to come around, because bad shows up unannounced all the time. No matter how much things are going good, bad things will eventually happen. That's life. No matter how much people love good, and dislike bad, these two things balance each other out.

Good times and good things would not feel so good, if it was not for bad times, and bad things. You would not be able to fully understand the meaning of good, if it wasn't for bad. You wouldn't have any real appreciation or admiration for good things, if bad things did not happen. Bad knows that it is needed, and that's why it continues to show up unannounced, so that it could spoil and ruin your good experiences, and good moments. Bad knows that it has the power to turn your joy, love, faith, strength, hope, and smiles, into pain, hate, faithlessness, weakness, hopelessness, and frowns.

Bad times, experiences, and circumstances are inescapable, because whatever is meant to be, will be. Bad will not last forever, eventually some good will surface. "Patience is a virtue. Good things come to those who wait," but sometimes good things fall apart, so that better things can fall together.