

If a convicted felon in a prison garden were to plant pink roses, the soil would produce just as lovely flowers for him...

- Science of Mind, p.96

Hi Destiny ♡

I'm glad to see you say that you are doing well out there. I am kinda concerned about your "living with a friend" thing, but you are a big girl... with big brothers and a crazy dad so I trust you'll be okay. In fact, at this

"living with a friend" juncture in your life I have to say: Settle for nothing but the best from yourself, above all, baby girl.

Which brings me to comment on your finishing high school of course. Do you have all the necessary credits to graduate, which allows you to skip a few days? Or are you willing to skip the ceremony of graduating and simply get a GED, and be on your way? What are your plans once the curtain falls on this stage of personal development anyway?

Do you even like school, I wonder?

Will you go on to college, or some vocational training? I hope you don't mind if I ask you questions like this.

Like, what are some of your goals in life?

Where do you see yourself in six months, one year, five years, etc.? Do you plan on having a family, or a career?

Or do you plan on just accepting whatever life brings you, why?

I really, really, really want to know.

How do you see (your) life?

A "day-care kinda thing", ya say? Are you seriously getting paid to play with kids? Too cool! Good for you sweet heart... I pray you always give your inner child places to play in life.

Believe you me, baby girl... taking life too seriously and growing old sucks (the life sorta living)! Residential treatment, ya say? Was that why you had stopped writing to me for so long? (please don't ever do that again). Would you please honestly tell me one thing: What was the most important lesson you learned from that whole experience?

Okay, so you kids are spending time with mom? Bless your hearts. This is good to know. I'm happy for you all. I can go on about how much I miss you all and how much I cherish the memories you, mom and I made with you all, but I don't dare get all nostalgic just now, okay? Please believe that I do wish you all - all the best, in every way.

Sweet D♥ - if you are in fact "interested in finding out more" about me, as you say... I promise to give you honest answers to any direct questions, okay?

Many of my past blog posts are very sedazzling, I admit. Those random ruminations are merely my reconnaissance of past events I've analysed. If anything has stirred your curiosity, I will be glad to answer any questions you have for me.

About the resemblance you see in our old pictures, yes... lucky you ♥. I've given you that genetic key which opens many a door in the mansion of life. This is exactly why goals are so very important, dear one.

There are so many doors of opportunity in the mansion and... well, I'm here to tell you there are some you should not go through before you're equipped for the experience - just as there are some rooms of existence a lot of folks find their way out of fever... be warned! Providence favors prudence. That's why I asked you: "How do you see (your) life?" That pretty much determines which doors will open for you.

I have faith in you Destiny♥ Be blessed