Alexandra,

It was great to hear from you again. I thought I'd lost you for a minute there, as I displayed my respect for your relationship. I am excited that you come to me from South Africa. It blows my mind how small the world is, yet so very big. I was reading a book about Philadelphia, where I grew up, and it amazes me how much I didn't know about sitting just a few blocks away. The depths, richness & history behind it. My hometown.

Well, now that I know that you can break bricks, I may find use for you in the future if the courts don't act right. So please standby:)

I had a Godfather who taught me a few basic exercises in the martial arts before he was shipped off to war. Although I didn't stick with it, it surely stuck with me (getting out of a few scrapes). I do understand the peace you speak of, as I've too felt one with the world. It's truly spiritual! I still feel it today in everything I do. It became a way of life for me. I would've loved to see you kick some ass in a tournament.

I look forward to our new friendship as well. Make sure to include your address so I can write back. My address:

Daniel Gwynn #CW5713
175 Progress Drive
Waynesburg, PA. 15370
