— POPULAR SCIENCE DECEMBER 2013 WWW.POPSCI.COM, P. 76.

"Becoming a skilled marksman can take years. Or hunters could just use a TrackingPoint Precision-Guided rifle. Once a user gets a bead on a target, the rifle's built-in ballistics computer combines reading from a laser range finder, three gyroscopes and accelerometers, and temperature and air pressure sensors to fine-tune the shot. The gun has a range of up to 1,000 yards and come built in Wi-Fi and in-scope video capture, so hunters can stream their exploits to a tablet or phone. From $22,500."
