

Problem With Breast

I'm not positively sure but I think it was on G.M.A News that I saw and a lot of people find it disturbing that women will breastfeed their babies out in the open.

My only thought to this is what the fuck! I still have a hard time grasping that people (especially men) have a hard time viewing this. Not cause it's a breast or a sexual thing but because a mom is feeding her baby. And what exactly is disgusting about this? What can society find fault with giving nourishment to the next offspring and generation of our species? Most find breastfeeding a good thing but out in public it's a totally different thing.

To those that watch the tv show on ABC "what would you do" you can see this with a actress breastfeeding a baby and people complaining about this. Now it's in a restaurant and people are trying to eat and may not try to look at this but so fucking what?! In the battle of wanting to eat peacefully and not have to watch or whether feed her baby whether covered or not versus a mother feeding her child to keep our species going and creating a bond with her child, I must say hands down that not only does the mothers needs trumps those of wanting to eat 'peacefully' but the mothers take the victory. My views do not reflect society nor should they but my mind is hard at work to grasp this.

I do find it hard to digest that people have a hard time looking at mother's breast feed and are laxical when it comes to pornography, strip clubs and other sexual innuendoes that are highly bias and sexist. What's not backwards about this?
