

Human Trafficking and the Sexploitation of the World's Youth Population

By Khalfani Malik Khaldun

Today in Amerika, and around the world at large, children are being kidnapped, sexually abused, and caught up in this vicious cycle of child exploitation.

Children are being bought and sold by human traffickers in many sophisticated, underground and behind the scenes sex rings. These predators are both men and women from all walks of life, many of whom are extremely wealthy and can afford to travel all around the world to engage in these actions. These predatory fascinations encourage their desire to sexually exploit young children.

Having recently watched a documentary whose entire intent was to clearly expose the magnitude of human trafficking going on, I will be forever scarred by having learned about the human sexploitation of the world's children. These predators have more associates trying to buy children, have sex with them or use them as pornographic slaves. Then there are people trying to participate in the drug trade.

It is thoroughly documented that many of the poor families in the Third World countries, in a rush to provide a better living for their children, become seduced or manipulated by these sexual predators, who speak eloquently and flaunt their money. They convince these families that their children will be well provided for. We should never make it easy for these sexual predators to gain access to children.

Scouts are recruited and hired to pursue or kidnap children from all corners of this earth. Children are tricked, drugged, and transported under the cover of darkness to parts unknown all around the country. God chose women to create and bring children into this world. Our children are innocent, without any sinful nature or quality about them. They are as important to us, just as important as the air we breathe. Children are the greatest reflection of God than anyone else ever can be.

There is absolutely no reason that every able-bodied man or woman cannot help in some way to prevent children in your household, church community, or neighborhood from being the next unexpected victims of this international ring of child exploitation. Everybody loses when our children are victimized or killed senselessly and so easily.

Killing them or abusing them is like killing God, and then ourselves, As a revolutionary man, and a father and a grandfather, I will not stand for any child of any race to be harmed. We must work collectively to shut down and dismantle all sexploitation operations. Power of the youth, power to the defenders of the world whose mission is to protect our children! Take special care. "All it takes for evil to exist is for man to do nothing!" A luta continua.
