Subject: "Grinching"

Well, I guess there can't be a Merry Christmas without a grinch or two working to screw things up. The week started out very well until we received a 3 a.m. wake-up call from of "Santa's Grinches" pounding on the walls. All day & night "thump, thump, thump, thump, thump!" It was difficult to determine who was actually doing this, so we just endured. He has stopped pounding on the walls yet.

Another Grinch was our local "Mad Hatter" who loves to spew hatred & threats indiscriminately all day & night. He's been at it non-stop for weeks now, and seems to have kicked it up a notch for Christmas. The staff seems unable to curb his enthusiasm. It doesn't take much to get him started, and my TV or Radio fails to drown him out. We've tried to talk him, only to become the target of his next rant of defamatory bigotry, calling people faggots, perverts, homos, etc. He even had the audacity to go outside to the yard and spit on someone through the gate. The target of his cowardly assault couldn't respond because he was trapped in an adjacent cage. This violent act did not go unnoticed by the staff, and he received a misconduct which is sure to land him in the hole. But due to the mental health policy, he will not do much time (as if it ever did any good).

There was also a very grinchy guard who made it difficult for the workers to celebrate the holidays. Even his coworkers fell victim to his villainy. It's a changing of the guard as he's trying to stay on the block by being a backbiting super.

In spite of these Grinches, we still enjoyed our Christmas.
Can't sweat the haters.
