

Daniel Gwynn Blog Update

Date: 1/3/14

Subject: "Happy New Year!!!"

January 1st is the beginning for me, and the end for the nightmare. I'm fighting to be free, for my life. I'm starting with new artworks & projects so you all can get to know me a little better, and decide to help me achieve my goals--justice & freedom. It's going to take some time for the new paintings but I ask you to be patient, for you will not be disappointed. My projects are in the works as well. I'm still working out the details to bring you a new line of designs I feel you can get behind & support. One project is writing more about the injustices in my case. By talking more openly about the issues you'll come to understand how my wrongful conviction affected you. Believe me when I tell you, that if it can happen to me it can most surely happen to any one of you. I was dragged down the street in my drug-induced stupor and handed this murder case. There wasn't any evidence that I had done anything wrong except slowly killing myself on drugs. Nor is there any evidence linking me to the victims of this terrible crime. My photo was plucked out of a photo spread from a case these people were actively involved in, and so were the detectives investigating. We still don't know how I became a suspect, but we do know, and can prove, that the DA lied in open court about it. It's truly disturbing how this goes on everyday to people all across this country. Unless there's DNA evidence, no one wants to believe that the police got the wrong man until it's too late.

Well, it's a new year, but the same old battle. But I'm older & wiser. HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO ME!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!