Halo Joe.

It was indeed a remarkable x-mas day visit my friend. The first visit in sixteen years in fact. Thanks for the reality check.

Dear Bill and family,

I had the opportunity to visit Bill on Xmas day. We spoke about his blog and so I thought I would say something and I hope this is ok with everyone as the rest of you don't know me at all, so that can be kinda strange.

Yea, believe it or not, I just received my print-out of this message you posted on my site. Thank you for introducing yourself to my family, bro. — I especially appreciate your encouragement for them to come visit me too. Awesome!

I've seen from some of the postings that some members of the family have had problems (just like anyone does) from time to time. It looks like Bill has been trying to help you with these situations and in life and has been trying to send as much advice and love as possible. I would like to back up what he has said and offer my help as well. If anyone needs anything, please feel free to let me know. I will check the blog once in a while; or you can just write to Bill and he can let me know.

Joe, would you please comment on my advice to my young'uns regarding the "Many rooms in the Mansion"? I'm wondering, does it read as clearly as I write it out? What does it appear to you to be saying?

On another note, hopefully there will not be a problem with posting the attached pamphlet on A New Slant On Life. I suggested my son Mike pick up a copy to study recently. I wish my whole family would read it, as it certainly does put a New Slant on things. If only I had read it earlier in life, my life may have turned out much differently.

All my best my friend.
