

I have not been writing long, I just write alot. I write thoughts and wants and needs and sometimes they turned into poetic forms. It is like some "God" of inspiration take hold of me, and I just put it down. Some poems little correction have to be made, others I have to re-arrange. I've been seriously writing since 2007. I was writing to this "Lady", we would write pages at a time; then one day she just stopped writing. That was hurtfull. I wrote numerous poems and acrostic for her. She is the beginning of writing.

Well I never really thought of "Heroes", until you said it. I had an education oversea, until I was 15, and I encountered La Fontaine, Victor Hugo, etc.,. Perhaps they have influenced me (subconsciously). However, I really like Walt Whitman alot, because of his style of "Free" writing, he does not care about alot...I would say he is one influential in English Lit., love "Leaves of grass" wish I had a copy.

I had to look up Aristotle. I have this book of quotes, he is in there, really good stuff: "Plato is dear to me, but dearer still is truth". I think I will love this guy, if I read more of him.

As for Aquinas, I heard of him but read little of him. Do you have some Ideas? be aware that books sent to me must be from a vendor-with the receipt of purchase. Copies can be sent in to me.

As for my inspiration they come from talking to people and observing, at time some come thru other media like TV, or reading another poem ect.

The Bible is a constant source of inspiration.

Calhoun25, thanks for responding, it took a little time to write back. Was waiting for some stamps, and was low on ribbons.

Peace, Childeric.
