RE: CIVIL RIGHTS COMPLAINT (POST).

I finally found out that my 3rd Amended Complaint has in fact been received and filed by the San Jose, Northern District Court. I wrote about this before, because it has been a struggle trying to get my court documents to the courts.

On several occasions the judge dismissed my case because the court didn't receive my documents.

The court believed that I was intentionally delaying and shirking my responsibility in pursuing the civil rights complaint.

And I had to file all kinds of motions and arguments to convince the judge that I did in fact file them. This has really been a hassle because it's delayed my case; each time it's taken six to nine months to get the case back on track. And it's now been four years that I've been waiting to resolve it, either by settlement or by jury trial. It makes no difference to me I know I'm going to win.

But prison officials have been holding my documents and claiming they mailed them. But if they had, the court would have received them, even if late, they still would have received them.

Now since the main defendant has supposedly died, right after I had him served with a court summons. It has set me back again.

The court ordered that I name an executor or representative for the deceased defendant. So I did that and at the same time I amended the complaint to add another defendant or two. And now hope that I can have it proceed through the court.

And last night I finally received confirmation that they in fact filed it. So that was good and now I just wait for the court to do its job.
