RE: STILL IN THE SHU. (POST)

GREETINGS,

yesterday thursday WAS the day that they pull us all out two sections at a time and escort us to the visiting room. we sit in the cells down there for a couple of hours while the maintenance people check all our cell doors.

they do this every six months, I guess this is the last time I will have to go through it, as I am expected to leave in a couple weeks.

for the last two days we have had no hot water. they told us that a pipe broke. it's something that happens a lot around here. this place is sorry, if its not the electricity that goes out, its the water. if its not the water its the television stations. I have gotten used to it, but its really messed up, because we hardly ever see an entire movie, or a program, because the stations constantly go out. then come on again, and go out all night. it usually happens at night.

so I will be glad that I won't have to put up with that any longer.

I have been waking up earlier now, getting myself adjusted to waking up early. once I get out of SHU. I must be prepared to do everything myself. no longer will they deliver everything to my cell. what a bummer I got used to the delivery service.
