DESIGN AND PUNISHMENT

SHOW architects draft more humane
PRISONS. BY CHARLOTTE SILVER

IN THESE TIMES, inthesetimes.com
MARCH 2014, P. 43

Architect Raphael Sperry, Prison
activist, extraordinary.

1 of 2

Sperry who serves as President of the Nonprofit Organization Architects / Designers / Planners for Social Responsibility, believes the endless iteration of prison reform are futile until the fundamental problems plaguing our criminal justice system are resolved such as skyrocketing rates of incarceration, mandatory minimum sentences and over representation of people of color in the prison population. No design innovation can mitigate the savagery of excessive incarceration in America. Sperry argues, and therefore architects should refrain from accepting contract to "reform prisons with new designs."
