Take Your Place

By Stella E. J.

At the end of the tunnel, you are my light,
you brighten up my day, even at night.
At the end of the rainbow, you are my pot of gold,
something everyone wants to have and to hold.
Reached the end of the rope, but God held the other end.
He has blessed me with you, my very best friend.
Trying to figure out, exactly what's on your mind,
touching you everywhere, making you float on cloud 9.
The feelings I have for you, are so sincere,
emptiness comes over me, cause you're not here.
It's been 9 years and baby you're still there,
deep down in my heart, I know you still care.
You have been there, for all that I've been through,
so I would be a damn fool, to get out and leave you.
If I turned my back on you, that wouldn't be right.
I will always be loyal to you, and make you my wife.
You are the one that makes my life complete,
make my knees weak, toes curl, and I can't speak.
I wish I were there, to support all your needs,
but when I finally hold you, I promise I'll never let go.
I promise to keep a smile on your beautiful face as long as I'm breathing, no woman will ever take your place.
