Belated Reply To The Gay Issue Comments

My apologies for not preparing & posting this reply sooner. I saw that your comments required a thoughtful reply, moreso than the mostly humorous (yet entirely accurate) tone of my original postings. Alas, I was overwhelmed by the misery of my recent trip to the B.O.P., the stress of trying to figure out what's going on here & how to survive, as well as straightening out/stabilizing my multiple pending cases, etc. Let me get right into it.

JT. Almost all of what you said is true: it's hard to control one's sexual instincts, "behavior," without ^{becoming} psychologically warped, as Freud did a good job of explaining (yet erred in assuming repression of sexual instincts was the cause of all psych. disorders). A good, comical -not too brutal- example of sexual repression inflicted on many is that masturbation is wrong, worse, is a "sin," might make ya go blind. 😊 A lot of unneeded anxiety is due to irrational repression of our sexual instincts - having been raised Catholic, I know this well, with my thick glasses (yet hairless palms).

You were wrong to ^{say} that nobody wants to be around others having sex next to them, in the shower, e.g. Heard of gay bath houses? I wouldn't want to have gay men even kissing around me; it'd bother me; but I'm straight. As Madonna and Britney Spears - or was it Lady Gaga? - showed when they kissed before an audience, many people (mostly those attracted to women, I suspect) are titilated by public sexual activity, that they wish they could be a part of.

No biggie, but wanted to clarify.

Because I don't intend to post the piece I promised in a past post - Peter Piper picked that phrase! - about homosexual reality in prisons, I'll do so here. In some U.S. prisons, particularly those in the South, in CA & in New York, homosexual activity is common & open. In Louisiana, e.g., almost all the Blacks go gay for the stay - this is according to Black prisoners who did time the \therefore . I mean, they will openly play with nude transexuals, and effeminate men. The way it was described to me — by a straight Black man, whom said he was deemed queer for not showering nude with other prisoners (they had group showers) + not being totally nude while on the toilet (like the other prisoners), + whom staff tried to punish by putting in a block with nude, sexually aroused young Blacks — it was a regular Sodom + Gomorrah.

And, if you look up an older (2005 or 2006, I think) article on prisons.org, titled something like, "Black leadership calls for condoms to be available in Prisons + Jails," you'll see confirmation of this phenomenon.

You may assume I'm being racist, but the White groups in prison usually prohibit homosexual activity, violently. Of course there are White prisoners who are gay or engage in gay behavior, but the White groups reject +^{or} prey on them, generally. I know, for example, that the Aryan Circle's constitution forbids "any" homosexual activity. But, I knew an A.B. in WI who was/is well-known for chasing "punks" (effeminate gay prisoners), +, ban chance, met an effeminate gay white man here (he's in very good shape, so is left alone by the White gangs) whom had a thing going with that gay A.B. in WI.

Who's gonna tell a stone killer they're bogus for having sex with ^{other} men?

There's passive + then there's violent men in prison. Sometimes the violent ones are gay + they don't get harassed.

And, JT, not everyone "just want(s) to do their time," as you said. There's a lot of predators, bullies, + other types of assholes in prison who want others to be more miserable than they are. Some are gay, some are straight.

One's sexual orientation does not present a moral issue, to me. Only if it's 1) hurtful to another, + 2) something that the actor can control. Etc.
It's just another part of prison that I sought to explain.

And, let me be clear — I can not speak for gay people, nor am I even advocating for their right to be gay. I'm just talking about my experiences + observations. Thanks for your comments JT.

Nicki. Greetings. Long time, no hear. But, yeah — I have understood that you are a single mother, employed & in college. No worries 😊

So, you take issue with my "touch of raised" comment, huh?

First, let me repeat, I'm not throwing stones at homosexuals. Nor do I speak for "them" — and that them has a lot of variety in it (not just lesbians and gay men, but dominant vs. submissive homosexuals, transgender homosexuals; lesbians who's sole sexual activity is cunnilingus; other lesbians who also use phallic sex toys; gay men who only engage in fellatio; others who do it all... etc.). This broad variety in homosexual behavior¹ itself suggests that human sexual behavior is not something determined by one gene alone, which also opens up the possibility that "nurture" — environmental factors — may play a role in determining a person's sexual behavior.

Now you, Nicki, raise your daughter's sexual orientation. It seems to me that you think I might be saying a parent is to blame for their kid turning out to be gay/lesbian, thus you might be to blame for your daughter's lesbianism. If so, then you let that troll SAH get under your skin with her noxious comments. While I do believe that a parent, parents, or other adults or role models may influence a child into manifesting homosexual behaviors (how this may occur would take dozens of pages I don't want to write to explain — so let it suffice for me to say the influence may come from a gay role model, or a terrible heterosexual role model that instills disgust in the child of "heterosexual identity").

Now you really think I'm attacking your parenting, huh? 😊 Again, I'm not directing this at you. There's other people in the world besides you Nicki, such as my terribly overbearing uncle who (bad-assed as he is) produced an effeminate son, no other children, and never formed a deep

F.N. 1. Let us not forget the wide variety in the manifestations of heterosexual behavior. See FetLife.com (which I soon hope to be on 😊), e.g. some dudes get off on being spanked (sorry, not me). Some chicks like to be choked and slapped around (I met one on the transport bus on my way here — she was also really intelligent, learned, and an ecstasy (MDMA) fan relationship with his heir (nor with anyone else). But, bastard that I am, I must point out that it is possible that you so disappointed your daughter as a model of heterosexual womanhood that she rebelled by becoming a lesbian, or the males she knew were so pathetic that she came to prefer woman as lovers... etc.

There's a lot of possibilities. But, from what I know of you & the little I know of your daughter's development, it sounds like 1) you were a decent mother, & 2) your daughter falls towards the extreme end of the sexual orientation spectrum... to the left, for "Lesbian." And it would be "wrong" (as in psychologically unhealthy) to try & nurture away a sexual orientation that is predominantly or entirely caused by genetics. A parent will just warp the mind of a child who's naturally gay by trying to straighten them out.

Of course many religions say otherwise. But my religion is reality.

More evidence - or, my only evidence, so far - that sexual orientation is not quite ^{as} black or white (or straight or circular) as ^{most} religions preach is the facts that:

- In the Louisiana state prison system, Black men turn gay for the stay (the group "D.C. Blacks" in the B.A.P. is notorious for this too, having warred with other Black groups who didn't like getting raped by the D.C. Blacks);

- In ancient Greece, male homosexuality was common; it took centuries for Greek civilization to value the beauty of the female body (yet Greeks did not gay themselves into extinction...).

The other possibility - that the above groups have a gene (or genes) that made them born to be gay, or bisexual - seems dubious to me.

Possibly some geneticists will or have discovered the genes responsible for determining the traits that come together to create one of the many types of homosexual orientation. If you have any info on such, please share it here.

But I - a lonely, homely heterosexual - am done discussing this subject, at least seriously, for now...
