That was a sweet note you left + I thank you for it!!

I haven't had an X or an O in... at least 14 years.!!

Thank you also for your longevity as a reader. Most readers seem to fade away after a couple months. Life is faster for you all out there, so I understand. It's shockingly fast for me in the B.O.P. too, after my more than a decade in isolation in WI's prison system.

By the way, I just sent an essay to American Prison Writing Archives (look them up on dinitiative.org/projects/apwa), which they say they'll post sometime this summer, ~~which~~ titled "Sons o' Bitches I've Been Celled Up With." You'll hopefully find it amusing + get more stories about how I've got along with (or not) other people in here.

You're in a community shelter? If you're willing, feel free to tell me more - for domestic violence, 1/2 house, etc. - about your situation. If I can help, I will. I did so for some girls I met on the bus on the way to the B.O.P., as best I could do so verbally. I know there's a lot of scumbag men who prey on women who are nice, which pisses me off, because it discourages women from being nice + being able to trust a man.

So, I wish you the best + thanks again for sending me some tender sentiments.

Bisses (as a French girl told me...)

Nate.
