Miss Jaji,

Thanks for the moral support, it's always needed in times that seem so close to grasp. My freedom (you know what I mean?) it's even more pleasant to know that you still out there hanging in there, unlike so many others we know, and for that reason alone..."I'm proud to have you as my closest confidant from back when!" :)

And of course my book series includes Shawny "P". ;) I haven't forgotten you. I know you haven't forgotten me, even though we were forced to go our separate ways, I could feel your vibration and I know you could feel mine when I thought about it. It's true, I made bad choices that got me here but the only thing that matters (NOW) is saving the coming from going through this. In my books, I teach, I preach, I break down, I stay true to the streets, from my own experiences. It has taught me so much about life, about relationships, about family, about religion, about my impulses and many more things. At the same time, I still keep it gangsta (feel me?) :) It's a long, long process, but it ain't no process at all if it doesn't have that Slow "L" touch to it. :)

However, you know what it is with me. It's bulletproof tough too! I'm almost home, had a few glitches in the screen of things, but my digital television stayed tuned in to all frequencies. :) Hope you stick along for the ride? Until then, from here to there...whenever you feel that vibration... it's me thinking about you with a smile on my face! :) Give the kid(s) a squeeze for me!
