

HUMAN CREATION

Greetings! Your comments have reached me, and your words have touched my core. It's always a pleasure to know that my words touch the minds and hearts of many, because everything that I post comes straight from my heart. But some of the things that I post come from deep within a section of my heart, that's full of pain and hurt. Even if I wanted to, I cannot erase that section, because it's permanently engraved just like a tattoo. All of my bad experiences have each left a permanent scar within my mind, within my heart, and upon my soul. Even though most of these wounds have healed and become scars, these scars seem to reopen everytime my heart becomes heavy, and my soul becomes weepy.

"When it rains it pours", "Your imagination but my reality", "My weeping soul (part 1)", and "my soul still weeps (part 2)", are all pieces that I wrote during those dark moments, when I felt hopeless, lost, and riddled with despair. I wrote each of these pieces after looking deep within that section of my heart, deep within that section of my soul, where my hurt and pain resides. Whenever I do that, my pain can be heard and felt in the words that I express. My pain can also be seen if one were to look close enough within the windows of my soul. I appreciate what you said about hoping and praying that my next life is happy and free from any kind of pain. Unfortunately, pain, sadness, and despair, are all part of life, there's no getting around it. But I can create some sort of happiness, we all can. Even if it's only for a short period of time, it's still possible. Pain, despair, and tragedy are human legacies, joy and happiness are human creations.

PEACE AND BLESSINGS,

Troy