Subject: "In My Absence"

I've been silent for some time due to my pending appeals, attempting to right an injustice that has fallen upon me. I am in the Federal jurisdiction now--where I believe that justice may be found. I've been combing through all of the information available to me in order to best assist my attorneys in their drafting of my petition. It's still not written yet, I just decided to take a break because too much focus can narrow the vision. It's frustrating because the information I have in my prosecution is very limited due to the DA's office refusing to turn over all of the evidence in my case. It's been 18 years and they're still refusing to turn everything over--haven't I suffered enough???? It's still incomprehensible how I became the suspect in this arson/murder. We know that the witnesses did not give them my name or description as the prosecutor claimed. So how did I become a murderer????????????

I've also withdrawn from my attempts to socialize with the other prisoners. I worry too much about saying or doing the wrong thing that would set someone off. But it seems that no matter how much I retreat, they continue to advance their hostilities. For awhile I thought it was me that was in the wrong. But I found that in my doing absolutely nothing, I had still caught flak. I've been called out of my name, and accused of being a cheat just to have something to argue about (I lose far too much to be a cheat). It's been one thing after another and I've concluded that you can't hide from it. The insanity is always in pursuit.

So I've been even more diligent in researching my case, in the hopes that something earth-shattering will tear down these walls of injustice and set me free.
