RE: AD-SEG UPDATE. (POST).

GREETINGS.

The other day I was talking with one of the guards and he asked me if I knew a guy named OLIVERAS and while I was giving it some thought he says "he had Polio as a kid and wears metal braces on both legs".

I automatically knew who that was, I've often thought of him over the past 30+ years.

I answered "you mean Jerry" I said that's my homeboy I've known him a long time. So the guard tells me that he worked in textiles and this and that. So I ask him if this is where he died? And he says that's right he did die. And I asked him what was the cause of death, I heard that he died but didn't know if it was cancer or a drug overdose. He said it was liver disease he thinks from drinking too much.

My boy Jerry, man that's too bad. I told the guard that Jerry was convicted of a crime he didn't commit. And got life for it. All these years I'd hoped someone would help him fight that case. If I could of got in the same place with him I could of helped him get back in court. He didn't deserve to be in prison not for that. Jerry was a professional car thief. Man we used to party as youngsters, now I sit back and think "so this is where Jerry passed away". I guess he never stopped partying even in prison. But too much drinking is not good for you. People don't realize it, till its too damn late.
