

DEATH

So very little is known about death, yet, death effects us all. Death, not unlike life is quite natural, when it occurs naturally, in fact it has been reported to be the ultimate experience.

A transformation of life into death, life's final challenge. It is only fear that causes you to dread the approach of death, otherwise, death is a most comforting, blissful experience.

The experience of dying is absolutely tranquil. no pain, no worries, the world and all of its miseries, simply drops away. Of course you would need to die to verify that statement.

In reality most fear the absents of their life's continuation (i.e., relationships, possessions, etc), since there is simply no evidence death is anything other than another experience, that we all must endure.

Unfortunately, a natural death seldom occurs naturally, in the sense that you have experience and lived as much of life as you choose and have simply laid down and died. Generally, the body experiences some sort of forced trauma or disease to a vital organ of which triggers death to occur.

What is also meant by a natural death, is when the body has had sufficient time to prepare for death by releasing a narcotic affecting drug that allows the body to relax into an ultra-tranquil state. It is this drug induced, hallucinate state that many report a bright light at the end of a tunnel. Many, also report leaving their corporal body, hovering above as their entire life seems to flash before them. This is your psyche's final gift, a remembering.

During a dream a young women was visited by death and death told her to prepare herself, that the following night at about the same time death would come for her. The young women after awaking from this dream decided that the best way to avoid death was to not be at her house the next night, when death arrived. The women hastily packed an overnight bag and decided to visit her mother five states over. After hav^{en} driven all day into the night she arrived at her mother's home and reached in her car trunk to take out her bags when she felt a hand touching her on the shoulder.

SOMETHING TOUCHING HER ON THE SHOULDER

As she looked around, she saw death who spoke "I was worried that you wouldn't make it on time."

While life and death have no relationship, nevertheless, death isn't something on the outside of you that you can be on guard against. Life and death are flip sides of the whole. Similar to light and dark, when light is dark isn't, both dissimilar, but possessing the potential(seed) of the other. In fact, you are not living toward the end of life, but, the birth of death. We need learn to accept death as we have ^{so many} so gratefully accepted life.

DEATH AS WE HAVE SO JOYASLY AND GRATEFULLY ACCEPTED LIFE
