Hi Melanie — so cool! Thanks for the insight on how this all works, and thanks a million times for volunteering to transcribe my posts! Do you help a lot of bloggers out that way? Do a lot of other people do the same? It's really a great feeling to realize somebody out there cares enough to put that kind of effort into something so thankless; so thank you ☺ I'd always been a little bummed that my handwritten blogs would be totally invisible to search engines... it's very exciting to know that now, I at least have a shot ~~at~~ being result number 987,544 on someone's Google search. ☺ Any visibility is better than invisibility, and most prisoners are just that — invisible.

BTW, "sysop" is just techie slang for "system operator," basically an administrator on a bulletin board, aka system administrator, or "sysadmin", that's all. Keep doing good things for people — it is appreciated!
(I'll try to lay off the underlining a little bit, too ☺)
