

PER VITAM LUCIS

Let us strive without cessation to obtain that light of Truth which rest within the bosom of every living creature; That very truth which declares that every man and every woman is a brilliant and beautiful Star.

93 93/93

January 31, 2015

3 AM

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

Pax Vobiscum

It has been such a long time since my last contact, so much has transpired since that last entry.

"2014" I must say had its ups and downs; not only did my daughter Sarah cut me deeply by some careless and seemingly heartless and indifferent decisions, but my lil brother and best friend whom I hold dear to my heart was arrested in November and now sits in jail awaiting various court appearances for probation and parole violations, along with several new charges. He was released June 2, 2014 on (9) month post-release and (3) years probation after serving (7) yrs behind these walls as a youthful offender. I was so distraught at the news of his arrest; he's only 24 and I really wanted for him a better life, I don't want to see him end up as I did - that is spend 3/4 of my life behind these dark, cold and indifferent wall.

I was arrested on April 9, 1985, exactly one month after my 19th birthday and here I sit still just (37) days away from my (49)th birthday. I really don't wish this on anyone, especially a young kid with a very good heart and character. He really has so much potential and he's really like a son to me and I wanted so much to see him become that success story of escaping the terrible clutches of prison. I can only hope now that he will not receive an extensive amount of time this time 'round, and that his second time in the belly of the beast will be enough to awaken him consciously to the Higher Self and enable him to step out of this beast and become the bright and beautiful Star that we all are. He has the knowledge and keys - these I gave to him what time he was here with me his first time 'round; what he needs now is the wisdom and understanding - these we know he can only obtain through experience, sometimes hard & cruel experience.

Then the father of my Beloved Zahra departed from this world, and to see her in distress was and is quite troubling. Even worse is her being bombarded by insults and cold hearted attacks accusing her of immaturity and incompetence, while she's been on her own since the age of (19); she's (56) now and very sane and competent; very mature. She is a person who has a very compassionate heart and tries to help any and everyone - And this part of her nature does tend to cause her some misfortune at times since some people tend to prey upon people like this and then use them and abuse them beyond reason. This has happened to my Beloved, and let be on her about being cautious about who she aids and to what extent she helps. She has improved greatly and I am so proud of her.

Her own mother seems to be her main tormenter since her father's demise; And it's all about the possible inheritance of money. Funny it is how Death in all her dark beauty seems to bring out the greed in people when she comes to claim one of earth's children.

Some people seek to belittle and discourage others simply to uplift themselves, they attack and accuse and insult others hoping to create in them an overbearing sense of shame and guilt - When in reality they are so eaten up with their own failures, their own guilt and shame that their only hope of a moment's rest is to dump all of their shit onto someone else that is humble enough to accept it without resistance.

My Zahra is doing better though and she's learning to resist and not allow anyone entrance into her mind and convince her to accept blame, guilt, or shame which she doesn't deserve nor guilty of! It's ok to be humble and compassionate - But one must maintain their own individuality; being stern and courageous in knowing when and where to draw the line, then cussing the (BS) when that time comes.

What lies in the womb of time for me I know not, will there come a time that I will be fortunate enough to once again live life beyond these prison walls, I have no clue; It would be Awesome no doubt; but I do not and will not allow myself to succumb to hopelessness! I live life where I am and with what I have, not dwelling on where I'd like to be or to have.

I have been blessed many times over; I have (10) grand-children and they are my happiness and freedom.

Seara, whom I love dearly will soon be (9) and she is so smart; I am blessed to be able to correspond with her via U.S. mail, and I am learning the Spanish language because of her - actually we are learning together.

She is mixed (Caucasian & Latino), it's part of her culture (Spanish) and I told her that she should learn it, and she is my Precious Granddaughter and I should learn Spanish for her. So, each week I send her hand copied lessons as I attempt to learn myself and help her to do the same in the process.

So I am blessed as it can be seen; I realize that Yesterday lies in the grave and tomorrow is in the womb yet to arrive; I have a child called Today, and this child I must work with alone. Today is all we have and we must live Today - (worrying about yesterday (or) tomorrow) will get us nowhere fast.

I am incarcerated it's true, have been for nearly (30) yrs now; but only physically; there are people out beyond these prison walls that are in far worse prisons than I have ever been - that being because theirs is Mental & Spiritual incarceration.

- Pax Vobiscum -

Love is the law, Love under will.

! J. B. K. "Faithfulness"