

LOVE AND LOYALTY

April 29, 2015

All my life I have prided myself on displaying my love and loyalty to those who I deeply care for. I never wanted the people I care for to ever doubt my devotion to them. Specifically when it comes to women, whether that be a woman I dated, or one I was just friends with, I have always displayed sincere love and loyalty. I routinely went out my way to demonstrate my commitment, whether that be, forgiving cheating, accepting another man's child that came from cheating, losing my childhood friend for protecting you, when I barely even knew you, and vigorously defending you, when I knew you was dead wrong! why did I do all of this? LOVE AND LOYALTY!

I will not make it appear as if I'm perfect, but I know for a fact, "I am better than average!" Never been a cheater, never been judgmental, never called a woman out her name, never put my hands on a woman, and always Respectful! why? LOVE AND LOYALTY!

As of today, women from my past, who have wronged me, could write me and tell me their having a hard time right now, and they know I would do everything in my power to attempt to make her feel better, without question! In fact, women from my past often drop a letter in my mail box when their life is not great. Like always, I accept her with open arms, nurse her back to happiness, and then she disappear again. why I do this? LOVE AND LOYALTY!

What is mind boggling about all of this is. None of these women are here for me when I need them, only when it's convenience for them. I guess this is the price of one sided LOVE AND LOYALTY!
