

Reply ID: ehnv

August 8, 2015

First and foremost, thank you Julia and Tawnya for visiting my blog.

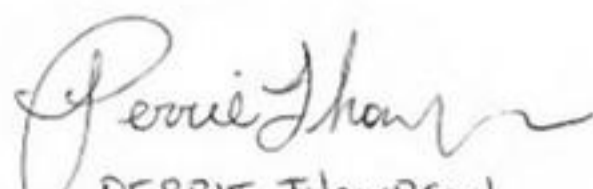

Tawnya, thanks for transcribing my post. Also the way you spell your name is very unique, never seen it spelled that way. I hope you continue to be a visitor of my blog. Take Care!

Julia, thank you for your comments. You appear to be a very intelligent woman! First, I will like it to be known, I do not endorse, embrace or agree with any act of violence committed by Japan, the U.S or anyone! I sincerely apologize if my remarks about Japan offended you or anyone else! I can assure you that was not my intentions! While I am not very educated in Asian history, I am mildly aware of the conflicts between China and Japan dating back to the late 1800's. I am also aware of the atrocities committed by both China and Japan. Yes Japan has committed some horrendous acts, but let's not forget, China murdered thousands of peaceful protesters in Beijing in 1989. So most powerful countries have committed some horrible acts at some point of time in their history. For this reason, I do not endorse any country. I endorse individual people, no matter what country their from. So my remarks about Japan was not an admiration for Japan. My remarks about Japan, was to show what self enhancement accomplishes. Japan could have dwelled on the bombing and used it as an excuse to regress, but they did not, instead, Japan emerged as one of the powerful economies in the world and as a leader in technology. How did Japan accomplish this? They did not let the bomb break them, in fact, it appears to have empowered them. African Americans and other minorities could learn from Japan. Dwelling on the atrocities committed against us, clearly has not changed much! We have to come together and build our communities from within and emerge a force to be wrecken with!

Again, thank you Julia for your remarks, I hope this gives you a better understanding. I hope to hear from you again. Take care!

stay Prayed up!

PERRIE THOMPSON