

Conclusion : The Japhetic Nation

This lesson plan should have allowed the student to walk away with an understanding of four main principles: 1) There are natural identities written in the hearts of men by a Divine Author of Creation that mankind instinctively identifies with and that transcend political borders, geographical locations, or artificial living arrangements. 2) The religious duties and morality of expressing a solidarity and patriotic love for the members of one's own nation, and expressing that love through concrete acts. 3) The actual identity, character, and origin of the Japhetic Nation. 4) The fact that whether or not members of the Japhetic Nation identify themselves as such or not, there are definite, identifiable forces at work in the world that do identify them as such, and are openly hostile to their interests.

The student should understand that there are innate, genetic, psychological, behavioral, and archetypical qualities about him/her that make him/her unique among the nations of the world and that there are other members of a global humanity that share these unique characteristics. The student should understand that he/she is part of a larger group that shares a unique history, culture and traditional past with each other and that it is desirable to maintain the existence of this extended family. The student should realize that members of other nations, also, share distinctive characteristics in common with each other, the realization of which aided the Israelites of antiquity, and can aid us of today, in interacting with the other peoples of the world.

The Japhetic Nation was identified by a Divine Author to the ancient Israelites as an "expanding", "bright" and "beautiful" nation. God created our nation uniquely to fulfill a purpose in creation which no other nation could or would fulfill. To allow the enemies of both God and man to erase and undo that which the Lord our God created is unconscionable. "We must preserve the existence of our people, and a future for White children!"
