

Preconceived, But do you
Really know who I am?

I personally pity many things. But one of the things that strike a nerve for me, right now in this era we live in. Is the mindset of the people in the world today.

Our society is nothing like it was in the 70(s), 80(s) or 90(s). People was more loving and compassionate towards each other. Can we just get away from the bad things that happens in our society for a change.

I remember how a neighbors would help others. I don't care if it was simple as giving a ride to a grocery, cutting grass, donating grocery or just calling to checking up on their neighbors. People would do things out of the kindness of their heart. This is special part about the kind acts. They would get a joy out of what they was doing. Most would say I just want to see him or her happy. People would treat others with respect and importance. God knows I would love to see that atmosphere more in our world daily. Not a spat here and there.

People was so easily to judge and throw people away. Everyone matter back in the day. People didn't have foolishness on their mind. Now people will cast you away

Just because they have a preconceived idea of who they think you are. Basically most people are judge off what somebody has to say about that person or how that person looks. I remember jobs was so easy to get. You didn't have to worry about Oh my hair too short, too many tattoos or people singling you out because they think your strange. It's so hard to get a job in society. That is ridiculous. I've heard people go to job interviews. Came out feeling like a failure. You don't do people like that. If we love others as we love ourselves we wouldn't do things that we don't want done to us. Where is the love and compassion. We got to give people a chance.

Back to remember how people would show kindness and expect nothing return. Also didn't judge. People enjoy helping others, it made their day. Our older generation was full of wisdom. We enjoyed great meaningful music. It seems like everytime you turn around somebody was dropping a record or song that was meaningful. The church sisters' and brothers' was more loving. you enjoy being in their presence. Family gathering was wonderful. No fights, great food, dancing, unity and lot of love. School was fun to attend. Recess, lunch, PE, friends to enjoy and learning. My favorite thing was the school chocolate milk. The children was fun to play with. A lot of us couldn't wait till recess.

We got to get the love and compassion back into the world. We've let the bad things that are happening in our world cause our hearts to become bitter, cautious and unloving. I am going to use my personal situation as an example. I just had a cousin who was 32 years old to be gunned down and killed. I am choosing not to become bitter. Instead I am planning on writing the guy. I'll tell him I forgive him. I am going to show him the love of Christ. What he did was wrong but do I have the whole story, absolutely no. All I have is he and my cousin was arguing in another room. Next thing the other people in the house heard a gun go off three times. I could preconceive that this boy was a monster. He deserves to die. That when prejudice, bias and judging comes into effect. I will not allow that to enter me because I don't know the whole story. Even if I did ~~not~~ know the whole story. I would not judge. ~~Not~~ Anyway I would like to know the truth.

But today we live in society of people who is not prejudice in color. But prejudice, bias and judgmental in so many things such as on jobs, against family or family members, churches, courts, community, schools, because your inmate, the way the person dress, who your parents, where you live, what you drive, who you hang around, if your poor, your hair too short or long, the way you talk, if you don't fit in with others; people treat you unworthy to be around, tattoos, your past history, piercings, baggy pants, in the government etc. List goes on and on.

People are not getting to know people for who they are. A situation's do is not define who a person is. We got to stop being so being so prejudice, bias and judgemental towards others. People do find themselves in the same situation of the people they put down. Then they expect people to understand them. I don't want to be treated unworthy. Especially our Christian or any other faith. Just about every belief teaches others as you love yourself. People in our society are quick to judge has been doing this for a very long time. We got to stop this foolishness. Show more love and compassion. Because you never know what situation you may find yourself in. You need love

And ~~compassion~~ compassion. As long as society portray it's ok to be prejudice, bias and judgemental. There will always be unnecessary dramas like unemployment, homeless, people falsely accused of a crime, hungry people, people in poverty, children in foster care etc.

We got to get to know others for who they really are. Sometimes the one we reject is the very one with the treasures we need on the inside of them. ~~That we~~ They just need a little encouragement to bring out the good in them. Some people need loving and compassionate people in their lives. Through the writing I hope each person would show somebody love and compassion. If each person does that it can change our whole world. I do it myself behind the walls, it works.
