Doctor Osemu Okpamen
Is A Fraud Jessi

created 17 April 2016

Clearly, Jessi, you haven't read much of my blog or you'd know that trying to promote any kind of witch doctor or spiritualist on my blog would unleash all the demons (that don't exist) in Hell upon you.

There are no spirits, or ghosts - period. This, I explained in "The Realm of Consciousness", part 1, posted here on 14 Feb. 2013, + more in "The Realm of Consciousness; Part 2, posted around April 2013. What there is floating around in your head is a profoundly complex brain (watch The Brain series, hosted by David Eagleman, by PBS) that you apparently lack the cognitive abilities it requires to understand - don't feel bad, as many scientist + philosophers can't explain consciousness nor comprehend how billions of neurons with hundreds of trillions of interconnections through which at least dozens of different types of signals can/do pass. The brain of a mouse makes the best microprocessor look like a caveman's club compared to an IBM, and our best microprocessors create awesome virtual reality.

Point is, neurons, neurotransmitters, physical material is all your "self" or "soul" is made of. No spirits made of non-matter can influence anyone's soul or mind. "Doctor" Okpamen couldn't cast a love spell on your ex, period.

Harry Houdini was famous for exposing every spiritualist as frauds. More recently, PBS did a show about a guy - I forget his name - who took Houdini's work further, exposing faith healers as frauds, Yuri Geller too, + even supposedly "scientific" studies of "parapsychology" as false. Why don't ya google that.

Alas, some gullible, simple-minded people will refuse to be saved from their ignorance. For those people, I have hair from Jesus Christ's armpit, guaranteed to make ya feel good - only 50¢ per hair. And if you test it + find my DNA in it, well, that Jesus's way of punishing your lack of faith
