America's Presidential Dilemma by Nate Lindell

17 April 2016

A couple weeks ago I read the Wisconsin State Journal, about who voted for what in Congress + the senate. The Democrats voted for laws that sought to protect our environment, ensure public access to govt activity, + against laws that'd restrict illegal immigration. All the Republicans voted the opposite. I forget what all the laws were, but basically the Republicans voted to fuck the individual + suck the corporation.

Don't think the Democrats in our state are pure heroes though - the likes of Rep. Sensenbrenner (may've spelled it wrong) will do anything the prison guards' union asks him to do, which, combined with Republicans like Grothman, is why WI prisons are so senselessly oppressive.

Then, when it comes to President, we gotta choose between the likes of: Trump (great that he wants to end illegal immigration, end NAFTA + CAFTA, bad that he's for "fracking" + comes across as insane);

Hillary (great that she's supposedly for equal pay for women, bad that she's a pathological liar, sold out to special interests + has Bill Clinton for a husband);

Bernie Sanders (great that he won't sweat states legalization of weed, pro environment, open govt, wants to break up big banks, isn't suckin' special interest peenies, but bad that he won't protect our borders + I doubt he'll be vicious enough on I.S. or command much respect from Putin)

Ted Cruz (great that he's ... not Trump, that's it, and bad that he's an arrogant, snobby, self-righteous, selfish, shit who'll ruin the environment, shit on the individual and - f-ing look at Texas!)

Anyway, we gotta pick one of these shits + each one will shit on us in some way, even if they wipe us in another.

Why the fuck can't we get someone who's a combo of Trump + Bernie, someone who'll end the bad trade deals (both these guys been about that from the beginning) and protect our border and go all-out on Islamiz state? Why do we gotta choose between being fucked or bleeding to death?
