Hello!

Thank-you so much for responding!

I've sent another picture of me and Brodie. (smile)

I left him in the dog dorm with another handler I still see him everyday. I can still work with him and train with him.

I have 3 more months left in the dog dorm. And I will be back in the dog dorm until my release. I still work out everyday and I am staying positive. I have no time for negative in my life.

I just received my replies tonite. I was so happy that someone even acknowledged my blog! Thank-you so much for the awesome comments about Brodie and myself.

I was totally excited to hear my name at mail call.

Anywho,

nothing much is really going on, I am learning alot about myself and the trauma that I have experienced in my past. why I act the way I do and how it has ~~effe~~ affected me in so many ways. I want to do all I can to help me be a better person. I know it may seem unfair that I've done fourteen years and now I've got to do a drug treatment program for 6 months.

I looked at this as well, I'm about to go into the freeworld this is my last step until I'm free. For the past fourteen years, that I have been incarcerated all I have done is go to school go to vocational classes work out and train dogs.

When I came to the drug program, I cried for at least 2 weeks.

my first womens trauma group that I went to I was asked what type of a person was I? what did I think of myself?

Honestly, I couldn't answer that I had no clue as to what type of a person I was. Now 3 months later I can honestly say I am a awesome, loyal, dependable woman. I'm a straight shooter, hard working reliable person. Today, I feel good About myself! (smile)

So, by the time this is posted
I'll have 7 months left.
Hope to hear from someone.
be good.
