

Portrait of A Nigga

As a kid I remember this phrase being used in the tune of, a sort of declaration of war against white people, and other times straight up FTW.

I mean, you name it, ole boy "Super Black", the T-shirts, the photos of This Genius with only that 4 word phrase, "By any means necessary", written on the front.

I remember being in Juvenile hell, and noticed what looked like a ripped up magazine, and one of the pages had the above 4 lined paragraph statement on it, all 4 lines, not just the 4 words.

And I was shocked by the first 4 words of the portion of this comment that I had never seen before, or even knew existed. "Any human being, anywhere!"

I will concede to admit that as an adult I slipped back into the mindset of hatred of most non-black people, and yet, proud to announce my second recovery about 13 years ago, good to be back.

In fact, it was this comment by our genius MR. X, that reminded me of the lesson he taught me that day in a juvenile detention center cell.

I believe and teach that every human being has the right to self-defense.

The translation for me is super clear;

1. "No group, or individual person has the right to mistreat me, cause me harm, or treat me less than human."

2. "I am not a slave to the supremacy ideologies of no other man, no matter what color his skin is," "not even if his skin is black".

3. "Self defense doesn't constitute a declaration of war against all non-black people, specifically all white people, and if I must choose my friends carefully, I also maintain my right not to choose enmity".

4. "What is human can only be defined by nature, and not by the megalomaniacs of our species, it doesn't matter where they roam, in a government agency, in our communities or on some prison yard, and sometimes those individuals occupy each at the same time".

5. Never allow people to paint or draw me in the image of their imagination, I am also human.

With respect to the time and climate of the United States from which our Wise Elder spoke, I recognized that he had the presence of mind to not say Black, or Negro in this comment because he had an understanding that human beings come in multiple shades, intellectual, mental, social and sexual orientations, and that the federal government itself has proven that it is either unable or unwilling to protect the lives and property of those human beings.

It greatly disappoints our youth when we fast forward to 2007 and the federal government, our communities, and prison yards remain enslaved to hang ups that continue to stagnate our progress towards peace and equality, straight up.

I'm not one of the same religious faith as our beloved prince of the earth that spoke these words, however, how can I not love a person that put everybody on blast when it comes to who's really being viewed as non-human.

For us to continue to move toward becoming a true unity of one, it would behoove us all to recalibrate our own personal dispositions on the issue of what is equally human, and denounce idealized September.

Portrait of a Nigga

(song)

I've been cast out
from your society
Right of Wrong
good or bad
I'm your enemy,
can't fade the truth
and I don't give a fuck extermination youth

Black Male suspect victim's descriptions
got these demons fearing me
on a millimeter killin' spree
Now you can cut your finger on the crease of my dickies high as fuck
only got my mind on my crew
"NO LUV" bargain in my spit on them things
a nigga do what I gotta do

I am your portrait of A Nigga
This is A portrait of A Nigga you're lookin' at a portrait of A Nigga
you made me a portrait of A Nigga
