Law of the Land

By Jelle Eforo 2016

Glocks 45 calibers, even Barrett's,
the officer's gun, yeah! The one with vendetta's.
The badge they wear, suppose to symbolize peace,
symbolize authority, but it's unjustified in the streets.
Police suppose to protect people, when criminals roam,
but these officers have, ulterior motives of their own.
Too many people being shot, all lives matter!
But police are not responsible, forensics collecting brain matter
Internal Affairs come in, saying administrative paid leave,
and justify his force, by making citizens bleed.
If committing a crime, a citizen goes to jail,
and become criminals, but cops! they say oh well.
If anyone breaks the law it'll land them in prison,
it don't apply to police? For making those decisions.
when they pull their guns; and point it with accurate aim,
and pull the trigger, knowing bullets don't have no name.
when one officer lets off a round, others will follow suit,
despite hands in the air, and people yelling "don't shoot!"
who can we trust? to come when things get hectic?
All is a joke they say, call 'em, and you'll be in the paramedics
Even when you have no weapon, you'll still get gunned down, shoot you in the back, when you're handcuffed on the ground.
Some cops took an oath, others shooting one in way too tempting,
put the barrel to your head, and tell you to stop resisting.
Now-a-days it don't matter, if they say "let's see your hands," they'll still shoot you! now! it's the law of the Land!
