

"SELECTION 2016:" Your Voice, Your Vote Is A Joke

Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump are both on the same team, so do not allow yourself to be duped by the labels used to identify these two millionaires, and members of the ruling elite. Democrats and Republicans have propped up two of the most reactionary forces among them to participate in this year's presidential "selection" circus. And when all is said and done in a few weeks from today, the joke will be on you. The average person who believes their voices/concerns and their votes really matter to either Trump or Clinton.

The "selection" of who will take up residence in the White House has already been made, and is known by everyone - except you - who has a need to know "now".

One thing voters from the poor and working-class communities of color should hurry and wake up to realize, and that is, regardless of who is given the nod, the murders at the hands of Amerika's police shall continue unabated. That is because the system that permits these murders is being left intact and all that shall be changing is the person who will pick up where Barack Obama has left off.

"Until the philosophy which holds one race superior and all other races inferior, is finally and permanently discredited and abandoned, everywhere is war."
