

FORGIVENESS

October 28, 2016

Recently I've found myself very excited to talk to a lot of friends who made no effort to talk to me when I was at Pelican Bay State Prison. Crazy eh? I had a few different people ask me, why am I not mad? My response was, we all have intentionally or unintentionally hurt someone we care for. I know I hurt a lot of my love ones by being involved in a life style that thrived on terrorizing our communities. So I can not act like I am a perfect person. I have done so many bad things, that I can only hope I am forgiven for. I can not ask for forgiveness, but be not willing to forgive. Anyone can be upset and bitter, but it takes an authentic, humble, strong person to forgive!

So to all of you who may be afraid to reach out to me because you are under the perception that I'm mad at you, all is forgiven! Grudges and bitterness does not live in my heart! In life we hurt people and people hurt us. The lesson is, growing from that pain, and turning that negative experience into strength! Forgiveness is the ultimate showing of strength! It shows those that hurt us, we understand we're all humans, hurting each other is in our nature. But today is a new day, lets focus on learning how not to hurt each other, and rebuilding friendships!

stay Prayed up!

Sincerely,
Perrie
