Letter to Dan Tutka dated 1 Nov. 2016

Dear Dan,

What's up ya Polish sausage? 😊 I remember you, and everyone I knew when free. Many times I chew on memories about people I knew, how things went right with them, and wrong, how I influenced them and how they influenced me... and how they agreed to a 3-round bout, & I let them tire themselves out pounding on me for two rounds, then they quit before I could punish them in the third!

I'm still pissed at you for that! 😊

Anyway, wanting to help me and actually helping me print my autobiography are two different things. It's a big commitment, which is why I offer to pay whoever does so.

Consider if you really want to transcribe (you'd be able to use a script-reading program that turns my handwriting, which is neat, into computer text, then edit it for errors, for most of it) the 250,000 American words. Are you up for that?

Then there's e-mailing it to agents and/or publishers to get it published. It's so brutally honest about prison life, even parts that make me look bad, including the issue of racism (and Black prisoners' racism towards Whites) that it'll be hard to find a publisher. But when published, it'll sell.

Consider those factors Dan, then let me know by mailing me a letter:

I'd love to have you translate it into Polish & get it published in Poland, for which you'd deserve & I'd give you 50% of the royalties for two years.

Try this for starters though. Go to prisoninmates.com/NateLindell303724, grab the pdf of my poetry book EM Daer, vol. 2 (I'm going to post vol. 1 in about a month), and transcribe into computer text only the introduction — leave the poems in my handwriting, as is. (Photoshop out the crappy photo of me on the cover.) Then post the volume on wordsmash.com and set its price as FREE, so that anyone can read it and people learn about me as a writer. This will help create an audience who'll be interested in my autobio about my prison experiences.

Let me know how you handle that and we'll go from there.

I'd appreciate it, too, if you'd spread the word in Poland & the European scene about my blog — post my URLs — betweenthebars.org/blogs/540/ — on web-sites & messaging boards over there.

You're welcome to e-mail joan@forensic-psychology.net & ask her to let you see the first 4 chapters, which I sent her. (She seems to have lost interest.... Hopefully she wasn't just playing with me....)

Thanks for writing Dan. Hope you and the chickens are well. ☺

Respectfully,
Nate.
